

I recently moved from Fairbanks where K-LOVE is the ONLY Christian music station on the radio. Here in Anchorage there are only two I know of. If the station in either city were to be displaced by LPFM broadcaster the entire Christian community and many others who enjoy family-oriented music and programming would be limited to either having no radio station or choosing one that may not be appropriate for children or not the style of music they enjoy. KLOVE is relied on by the Christian community for news around the world, safe and uplifting listening music, and a way to reach out to many ministries supported by KLOVE. KLOVE is a way for Alaskans to connect with ministries and Christian life throughout the nation and without it resources for outreach and news would be much more limited. As it is now, the signal for KLOVE is very limited here (and in Fairbanks) and any other interference on the radio would drown the signal out. I hope this is taken into serious consideration and the decision is made to keep KLOVE on the air without LPFM taking priority over it. Sincerely, Catherine Dunn
